

To the FCC: Please don't shut down local stations in favor of more powerful stations. I would hate to see my local station KDRT disappear because of the encroachment of a bigger station.

Here are my arguments:

- * LPFM is about localism- a current buzzword at the FCC
- * Communities put significant investment into LPFM stations, they ought to be protected or at least have some displacement options.
- * The FCC needs to fix the conundrum they've created: de facto priority status to Translators and a super-streamlined process for Full Powers to move locales (both are wreaking havoc on LPFM stations)
