

Christian radio is an important factor in our lives and I believe this regulation takes away our rights as Christians. I listen to K Love regularly and enjoy the positive message it carries. My family, church and friends also enjoy this station and many of the songs played on this station are used in our church services. This world is not an easy place to live and we need positive, encouraging messages. I believe these rules are discriminatory, and personally, I am very tired of people finding ways to take positive, family-oriented messages off the air while those stations that have someone such as Howard Stern and his corrupt messages run rampant. An additional advisory board who may not be friendly to the Christian mission of K Love, or any of the other Christian stations we listen to on a regular basis, is not cost effective. These stations survive mostly on donations and these rule changes would only cost more in staffing and effectively force some of the smaller stations off the air. This country needs positive messages during these difficult times and the government should look into saving money instead of forming an unnecessary advisory committee.
