

I am very concerned with the proposed regulations for localized advisory boards, requiring increased staffing at the radio stations and limiting the "message" Air1 can give on the air. All these things would greatly impact my ability to listen to a very inspirational christian radio station (which by the way I support financially on a monthly basis through a donation, that is a stretch for me to afford with this current economy).

I have two young children that listen (& sing along with) the station I listen to. I used to listen to country music until one day when my then 6 yr old sang a song she heard on the station I listened to at that time, which had inappropriate lyrics for a child to be repeating. That was it, I stopped listening to a type of music that I knew as a christian I shouldn't be listening to. I then found Air1. What a blessing and inspiration the radio station is to my family. It helps me deal with rough days at work and horrible traffic in my daily commute. Please seriously consider the consequences of what your decisions will make. I absolutely love this station and would be devastated if they were forced off the air as a result of unnecessary increased expenses or told they could no longer express God's love for everyone over the air ways. Better yet, listen to one of the local Air1 stations so you understand what a positive impact they make to the communities they serve.
