

As a listener of Air1, a Christian radio station, I am strongly opposed to the proposed FCC regulations that could add additional costs to operations, create advisory committees, and control corporate locations that could force translator stations to leave the air. I think you will agree that so much of today's music leaves many uninspired, depressed or angry. It encourages selfishness and illegal behavior. No wonder our cities are overrun with crime, gangs, youth with STD's and teen pregnancy. Air1's music and positive messages provide much needed inspiration. I have been a listener and supporter of Air1 for 4 years and will continue to do so. While I know it is the FCC's role to regulate the air waves, these new regulations, particularly the advisory committee, will infringe on free speech and a station's ability to program according to its own standards. I respectfully ask the FCC to vote no on these proposed regulations.
