

It sickens me that all the perversion on the television & media, i.e. constant so called jokes and pokes toward Christianity is called "freedom of speech". The discontent towards Christians and Jews seems to pour out of Hollywood, the Movie Industry and even on what today's generation is given as Cartoons.

Take some time and have a sit down and watch some cartoons like King of the Hill, Family Guy, or the The Simpson's.( not to just pick on Fox Television)

If these same shows or cartoons were to disrespect or blaspheme Islam, Muhammad or The Holy Qur'an in the same way, on television, radio or on any air waves on the globe, we have seen what happens. There are riots, mayhem, death threats and death.

Are we not what some would call "lucky" that Christians turn the proverbial "other cheek? Are we lucky that the Bible teaches them to love those who persecute them and to love their enemies? Here is a funny oxymoron, the more "radical" a Christian is the more they seem to let themselves be a door mat. You can usually walk all over them, spit upon them and they still greet you with a smile and open arms. What is the deal with that?

I guess we "are" lucky in many ways. We can slam them, make fun of them and their so called God and religious practices and use them for our humorous needs and not worry about repercussions of any kind. So what I'm trying to say is, if we don't allow Christians to have their freedom of speech, people won't know what we're making fun of. All the prime time and late night television programs will have to hire writers with "real" talent to get the laughs etc; because after the Christians are out of the way, people/audiences will have no idea what we're talking about or making fun of.

Please extend the same rights to those Christian folks too, or...I may never laugh again.

Sarcastically yours (in Christ), Darren W. Caloccia
