

I am strongly opposed to the type of regulation on radio broadcasters that is being considered by the FCC. How can it be that local radio stations are out of touch with their listeners while bureaucrats in Washington know what we want to hear. We tune in to a specific radio station because we LIKE what they broadcast and if we change our mind we are free to tune into any number of other stations, the internet and many more forms of media at our will. Any attempt to regulate radio using local boards to decide what we "need" to hear is just one more form of political correctness that, if passes, may cause many of us to look into what it would take to change the power and focus of the FCC. Leave the broadcasters to operate in a competitive market and let the people make their own choice in what they want to hear.
