

You shouldn't do anything to religious programming or radios. If you try to, you obviously haven't researched its impact. KLove and other christian radios around the country have changed and even saved hundreds of lives everyday with its powerful messages. Everyday there's God at work stories. Even if your company's people or employees don't agree with the beliefs of the stations, you still can't deny the amazing things they're doing in the lives of other people. Why would you want to stop something that does so much good? Because of your own personal problems with it? If you were to actually look at the messages, songs, or anything else on those stations in a non religious aspect, you would find that most of it is very comforting and encouraging. Pretty much everyone I know, including myself & family, have Klove automatically on whenever we get in the car. Instead of listening to angry or distasteful music, we have something positive to listen to. It's just something to take seriously and really think about. thank you.
