Compensation for ISP-Bound Traffic

Implementation of the Local Competition Provisions in the Telecommunications Act of 1996, CC Docket No. 96-98

*Intercarrier Compensation for ISP-Bound Traffic,
CC Docket No. 99-68*

April 2008

The Commission has authority and should retain the current .0007 rate for ISP-bound traffic

- ISP-bound traffic should not be subject to reciprocal compensation
- The Court has given the Commission sufficient opportunity to defend a proper conclusion
- The record in this proceeding contains viable alternatives upon which the Commission can base a sustainable decision

Reciprocal compensation for ISP-bound traffic would have adverse effects in rural markets

- Dial-up ISP usage remains strong in rural areas
- Take rates for DSL in rural markets are lower than in urban areas
- Reciprocal compensation would skew normative assumptions by encouraging tilted traffic flows
- Carriers serving rural markets where dial-up usage remains strong would be particularly vulnerable to increased compensation costs

ISP-bound traffic should not be subject to reciprocal compensation

- ISP-bound traffic flows excessively in one direction only
- The Commission has found that it encourages market entry by CLECs intending to serve only ISPs, rather than provide competitive services
- Sufficient bases exist to support the current .0007 rate

Consumers would be affected adversely by reciprocal compensation for ISP-bound traffic

- ITTA members have calculated impacts that reach toward the hundreds of millions of dollars
- Rural broadband deployment would suffer if the Commission were to subject ISP-bound traffic to reciprocal comp
