

I understand wanting to regulate what broadcasters put on the air. but my local christian radio station e-mailed me because they're afraid this may lead to tighter regulations on what they are allowed to say on the air. i just think that religious freedom is something this country has been about form the beginning and that, that shouldn't change. and really, how often does a government policy ever end up just being what it was supposed to be, too often things like this get taken too far and blown out of proportion. that is why i am against this proposed regulation, not necessarily because of what it is but because of what it so easily could become.
