

I have an opinion on the new "fairness doctrine" that has recently been purposed. I am opposed to it because this is America, and as American shouldn't we have a choice about what we listen on the radio? There are many stations on the air, and therefore, there is a variety of opinions every issue being broadcast. If a listener does not like what is being said on one station all he has to do is hit the seek button on his radio. Enforcing a "Fairness Doctrine" would kill radio. Some stations would be forced to air things that go against their conscience, and I believe that most or all stations would become cold and sterile in many aspects. This isn't a controlled society in which the public is spoon fed exactly what the government wants to feed it; let the people keep their freedom to decide for themselves what they decide to listen to and to believe.
