

I would ask that the FCC consider not instituting more legislation and paperwork on local broadcasters with "Proceeding: 04-233". If local broadcasters aren't an integral part of their community, it has been my observance that they don't last in the market. The community has always driven the demand of the local broadcaster so increased legislation is unnecessary. The community voice and their opportunity to be heard are more prevalent today than ever before with internet, print and television. This increased competition for all media has allowed the local market to already dictate that local broadcasters are more proactive in their approach to local, and they have. Our network personally goes above and beyond to reach out to the local community with Live programs, magazine shows, talk shows, community calendars, EAS alerts, DTV notifications, and the list goes on. Singling out one media source for increased government intervention is not necessary.
