

I agree that pornography (hard core sex acts) should not be broadcast over the airwaves not should the content of Howard Stern or Imus but who will decide what we should see or hear and what we shouldn't. Will a small vocal minority dictate what the majority can not see or hear? As with free speech will a "Catcher in the Rye" be banned?

I watch cable tv and at present the fcc has the stations so scared that they are blocking out a picture of a naked butt and bleeping words. Europe is far more liberal about their airwaves and I don't hear about them being any more immoral than we are.

Censorship by government is slippery road and how do you discern the good from the bad?
