

Please do not open the white spaces to untested unlicensed equipment. I am a sound engineer working primarily in live performance. For years I have went out of my way to act in accordance with the FCC, having faith that it was always the right thing to do. Now the FCC is turning around and betraying years of hard work and trust. This will be a blow to our industry that I'm not sure we can recover from. Who wants to listen to someone's cell phone call or even worse some random electronic garbage signal to interrupt the show they paid $75 per ticket? Is the FCC prepared to reimburse companies for lost revenue and reimburse individuals wasted money due to one bad decision? Why is it so important to crush an american industry that brings people happiness and relaxation just so a few phone companies can make more money. Are you also going to make frequency jammers legal for commercial use everywhere in america, so we may defend our companies from unwanted interference?
