

Dear FCC,

I am a disabled attorney in California. I have severe radiation poisoning which causes me to almost have no where on earth to exist because the entire landscape is covered with various radio frequencies from internet dishes and wifi on private residences to cell towers and other communication towers placed all over the landscape.

I am not of the opinion that all telecommunications is bad. I am of the opinion that we should work together with the telecommunications industry to reduce exposure to the public as best as possible and we should have quiet zones in each county that is free of wireless, cell signals and the like for those of us that are unfortunate enough to be made severely sick from these signals.

There is peer reviewed research confirming that microwaves effect the body much like a pesticide in as far as cholinesterase productoin and melatonin is inhibited. There are many other studies that are from credible institutions and are peer reviewed that confirm blood brain barrier compromise and DNA breakage at an alarming rate.

I see children using their cell phones right up to their head for hours on end. We need to be a responsible society and take care of our children and other vulnerable members of society by at least putting the warnings out there so people can at least make an informed decision as to whether they want expose themself to this risk of physical damage. Likewise, the decision as to whether to site multiple antenna in residential neighborhoods and near schools should be left to the local municipalities.

This is dangerous technology to at least a percentage of the population. Leave decision s of health and safety to individual communities. WE are already radiating our population here in america 1000 times the level in other industrial countries and far over the level that is safe for the health and well being of our citizens. With the advent of wifi in homes, there are sometimes signals from five to six other wifi units from neighbors in one home. Has anyone bothered to study the effects of "layering" multiple signals over one area. FOr example there may be wifi, cell tower, sheriff tower, t.v, and radio signals layered over the same area. No one knows the cumulative effect of this.

I am of a small percentage of people that is devastated by this technology on a daily basis. I have lost two homes I own due to antenna going up. We need to be careful. Looking back 10 years from now and wish we had taken more care will not repair the damage. Damage to biological beings is indicated in recent research, lets be careful...and find responsible legislation that protects the public as much as possible while allowing the telecommunications industry to co-exist and stay in business.

There is a lot of arrogance and ignorance in the industry and government about the real effects of non ionizing frequencies. Saying your sorry later will not repair the damage that is irreversible. The health effects may be catastrophic not unlike a wireless holocaust. This is truly not overstated. Broadband and other wireless emanates a long way. I for one do not consent to be radiated by those that are not aware of the damage they are doing to themselves and innocent bystanders that have not consented to being caught in there wireless technology. Thanks and leave things to the local governments. Barbara E. Schnier Esquire
