Dear The Federal Communications Commission:

I am writing to urge you to consider live musicians as you think about the impacts of opening wireless frequencies. I am a professional musician and I derive 100% of my family income from my ability to perform concerts. The current proposal could harm my my personal livelihood, not to mention the companies that manufacture wireless music products, and everyone else who has a stake in supporting live musicians. Harmful interference could hinder the performance of live music in public schools, universities, churches, performing arts centers, outdoor arenas and countless bars and restaurants across the country.

At a time when internet piracy and illegal downloads has hurt my income potential drastically and with the general economic future looking bleak, I would pray that I could count on my government to consider folks like myself who in good faith have had to spend a fortune on equipment for a pittance in return.

Please think about the interests of live musicians and all who support them as you consider this proposal. Thank you.

Sincerely,

David Vincent
