The internet is just as important as the printing press. Either books or webpages, both are a medium of information and ideas.

To say the internet is solely for entertainment is an insult to those who use it for sales, news, opinions and knowledge.

I graduated from the local community college with a GPA of 3.75, and I only set foot in the school library for a couple papers and projects. The internet played a key role in my education. The internet is full of ideas and should not be taken for granted.

Also my sister lives 4k miles away and the best way to get in touch with her is internet. Communication is the first and most prominent utility of the internet.

Net Neutrality is essential to free speech, equal opportunity and economic innovation in America. Since the FCC removed this basic protection in 2005, the top executives of phone and cable companies have stated their intention to become the Internet's gatekeepers and to discriminate against Web sites that don't pay their added tolls.

This fundamental change would end the open Internet as we know it. It would damage my ability to connect with others, share information and participate in our 21st century democracy and economy. The FCC must ensure that broadband providers do not block, interfere with or discriminate against any lawful Internet traffic based on its ownership, source or destination.

As a writer I rely on the internet for research and jobs. Some times I rely on the internet for my projects.

I think the internet is vital for the economy. This is in part because e-commerce fuels our economy. E-commerce is also a boost for business in the States which is the backbone of our economy.
