

Automatic dialing machines shouldn't be used by telemarketers. In business, we all have to do sales calls, but to separate buyers from non-buyers, with non-buyers hanging up on the machine, it only helps them. This is disgraceful, and should be illegal.

Next up, it should also be illegal where telemarketers can call and talk to us and take up our time, but we can't call and talk to them. This is a one-way street, to their advantage. Often, their numbers are obscured with a 000000 number, or our *69 telephone feature simply tells us that the last callers number cannot be retrieved. If you're calling me, let's make it fair. I should be able to call them, and not some machine or not having to wait for someone for 1/2 hour.

Both these things should be illegal.

Thanks,

jeff
