

AT&T does not make Public, Educational and Government(PEG)programming available to subscribers in the same fashion that it makes commercial programming available. This is discriminatory and unacceptable.

AT&T has removed local PEG channels from the standard lineup by grouping dozens of channels into a generic "Channel 99." This strips away individual channel identities and deprives these channels of the simple ease and basic functions viewers expect.

Viewers can't switch between commercial and PEG channels or set a DVR to record a PEG program or get timely local emergency alerts or even closed captioned programming.

I ask the FCC to rule that AT&T's PEG product unlawfully discriminates against PEG programming in violation of the 1984 Cable Act and Commission rulings and policies.

Sincerely,

Mary Francis
