

BrightHouse Networks offers a service called START OVER where a program can be started over.

Wonder what would happen if BrightHouse would offer START OVER for the 10-year contract (as in "NO LONG TERM CONTRACT TO SIGN") in my development? If homeowner input had been allowed (the developer completely decided the issue) how many homeowners would have signed up for an exclusive, bulk-billed contract that allows BrightHouse to continually raise the rate by making homeowners pay THEIR NEIGHBORS' CABLE BILLS?

It's time for the FCC commissioners to give homeowners a START OVER by banning this practice that requires unsuspecting buyers (not informed of this policy of unlimited cable rate increases) to pay more and more every time an empty moving van enters the development.
