

I would like to see a broader use of the TV-Guardian in all media formatts to ensure that the profanity explicit in today's programming is subdued. The closed-captioning method of censorship is inadequate as it is incapable of effectively censoring all profanity and improper references. This technology needs to be improved and more widely utilized to ensure the proper censorship of modern media. Such measures to protect the material morality of our society are an excellent move in the right direction and would surely inspire future consideration regarding the effective censoring of media disseminated throughout our communities.
