

The movement of public access PEG channels to less effective higher numbered channels is a disservice to the public. Many people may not scroll through high numbers and therefore not watch the public access channels. This will reduce the audience, and most likely translate to less support for and participation in public access television.