

We need advanced parental control technology to be made available for filtering offensive content and foul language in TV programming and movies; whether viewed on TV, over the Internet, cable, satellite, DVD Players, Blu-Ray Players, gaming consoles, and other video devices. I hope that you can help American families with this prevalent problem that is increasing each year with all of this multi-media. The software for this technology must be built into the cable/satellite boxes and TVs to work with HD televisions. It is being offered to cable and satellite companies for free -- those that want to use it can pay a small fee for it -- and these companies have the ability to download the software into most existing cable/satellite boxes... still, the industry refuses to give families this individual control. Cable and satellite companies should give parents the option of using these parenting tools just because it's good business. This filtering out technology makes more TV shows and movies OK for family viewing. FCC needs to let the free market work and let us parents have this choice. Thanks for your help!
