

I would like to ask that you encourage and even make TV stations and cable and satellite companies offer filtering on future devices. TV is getting increasingly foul these days and I for one would like to have a way to make it safer for my family. Of particular concern to me is the commercials which I imagine is a big issue. Not too many companies would be excited about me being able to filter out their commercials but often when I'm allowing my children to watch a fairly "safe" program, I'm appalled by the commercials that come on especially from the networks themselves promoting some violent or disgusting new show. Is there anything that can be done, or am I just left with the only option of leaving the TV off completely? By the way, the constitution protects freedom of speech, but seriously what does free speech have to do with watching reenactments of brutal murder or sex? Maybe I'm just not smart enough to understand that. Thank you

Sincerely,

Josh Nerren

concerned citizen and father of 2 beautiful and impressionable children