

I live in a rural part of New York. I do not have broadband access to the internet, only a dial-up service from Verizon. The limitations of dial-up leave us severely disadvantaged in utilizing the economic and governmental resources which others with broadband access enjoy using the internet. The "ruralification" of broadband access is critical to all U.S. citizens equality of opportunity. Thank you for your time.