

National Broadband availability should be handled in the same manner as electrical and telephone hookup was many years ago. Planning is vitally necessary to the economy of the country and should be done by the government with no interference from privately owned and operated companies. They may be legally authorized to perform the services implementing the program but should not be allowed to make the rules under which they are to function. Everyone should have access to broadband service.