

Hello... I am a cattle farmer with a four generation farm.

Increasingly, my farm is needing broadband for field inventory, video conferencing, etc. However, there is no cable service, no ADSL, DSL, Microwave broadband available. Satellite internet is, of course available, and it is what I am now using. However, the latency is so terrible, that I cannot video conference.

Basically, due to online requirements for feed monitoring and inventory, I am forced to rely on older techniques which bites into my ability to compete. Broadband is really needed for me. Repeat on the satellite internet. It is good, but the latency defeats its use for our operation.

--

Larry Rymal