

From an article of the Associated Press, May 1, 2009

"The banks that are too big to fail are saying that 8 million Americans facing foreclosure are too little to count in this economy" said Senate Majority Whip Dick Durbin ...

It appears that the FCC agrees with these banks. So what if there are 8 million foreclosures. Those homeowners left in their communities can afford to pay for the cable TV and internet bills of those EMPTY HOUSES. Let the telecom providers keep raking in millions. So what if the whole purpose of bulk billing was to provide DISCOUNTED RATES to groups of residents. So what if three-fourths or two-thirds or even only half of the community must now pay for ALL of the original group. The whole purpose of the FCC existence is to protect the industry providers not the customers.

Come on commissioners. People out here in the real world are really hurting financially and need IMMEDIATE HELP! We CANNOT pay $150 to $300 PER MONTH for basic cable - internet service which is what we are rapidly approaching because BrightHouse Networks wants to give Mr. Miron a 10 figure bonus.
