Dear FCC:

I represent an entire community that is deeply concerned about the matter of profanity over the airwaves and specifically the Television/Internet broadcasts. In practical terms, because of the degradation of the broadcasts over the years, and especially within the last few years, not only have we as a family but even as adults have had to be very cautious about what we watch. Secondly, there are shows that our children could watch but because of the use of profanity and using God's name in vein or as a curse word, we have had to prohibit what shows are watched.

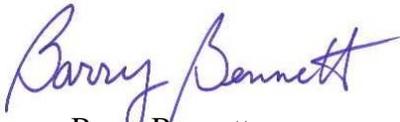

Years ago (in early 2000), we bought a DVD player that had TV Guardian built into it. Because of that, we are able to watch a wider selection of DVD movies and TV shows. Unfortunately, now we are significantly inconvenienced because we have to wait until a season of a TV show that we like to watch is over and then released in DVD to watch it and yes, that means we spend extra money to buy it so that the foul language can be filtered through our DVD player. This also occurs with movies. Many movies, both adult and children, we do not attend until they are released on DVD so we can watch them because of the technology provided by TV Guardian.

One of the biggest reasons we do not purchase Cable or Satellite is because we have no way to filter the foul language. We are joining our voices with millions of others asking you to support the move to incorporate the TV Guardian Foul Language filter into any and all devices to address broadcasts to the TV as well as through the internet.

Considering the day and age we live in now, I am utterly shocked that this feature is not available as a standard on computers and built into every electronic device. This technology is incredible and I know it would go a long way in communicating to the mass media of television, movie makers and internet content providers that there is a huge segment of the population that prefers to receive this content FILTH free. We support this effort and our dollars will also go behind supporting it!

I urge you to please get behind this effort and support all of us who care about making our world a nicer place in which to live. I expect the FCC to help all of us in this cause.

Sincerely,

Barry Bennett
