

Dear FCC, We first need to make it clear that no caps will be placed on any internet service as more and more information is passed through the net that can't be allowed to happen. With that being said we need to not have a monopoly in most parts of the country of who we can get broadband through.

I never really thought about it till the other day because I am currently deployed to Iraq. We had an outside broadband service that would allow us to use skype, yahoo and video teleconference with our loved ones back in the states.

Then they are being kicked off the job because US COMZ has an agreement to be the only ISP on post. This is crap, most the time you can not even log into yahoo messenger with their service let alone exchange pics, do college work or anything else online with them.

That made me think how it is in the states. At Fort drum where I am stationed we only have Time warner cable for High speed internet.

And now DSL does not count. We need to have the lines owned by the people for the people and not let the corporations own them and say how its ran.

We need to have actual competition not just in certain regions where there is a large population allow the little guys in everywhere and let the big guys in everywhere.

But make the price to rent the lines and the bandwidth be the same for everyone.

We can not continue to have just one company in a region control out internet if we hope to have the same type of access that Japan,

Korea,

Britain or most of the world enjoys. Stop letting these companies control it and suck us dry trying to get the most money they can. The future is in IP not the cable companies and broadcast television. It will all be served with packets over the net.

Let's be ready for that and allow the entire country enjoy it. Embrace the future and not let the cable companies be the banks of today.
