

DirectTV recently dropped the "Versus" channel from their lineup due to Comcasts over-pricing to DirectTV for the rights to that channel. I understand the competition factor in Comcasts decision to do so. However, I live in an area of PA. that does not have Comcast cable service available. Why must I be locked out of the availability of "Versus" if competition is not a factor? I pay high services fees to DirectTV. And another company that I cannot deal with decides what services I get? Has anyone @ the FCC investigated Comcast as to what Comcast is requiring DirectTV to pay for "Versus" channel? Is that fee fair and equitable as it compares to other channels? Why can't Comcast at least allow DirectTV to provide "Versus" those areas that do not have Comcast cable service available at a reasonable fee to DirectTV?
