

Dear Sirs: As an employee of Verizon and a proud member of Communications Workers of America Local 2222, I urge you to take the time to discuss how the high speed broadband network can be extended to all Americans. The internet is becoming an integral part of our lives, unfortunately if we live in rural areas it is more difficult to have access to high speed broadband internet services. All Americans should have access to high quality, high speed internet services at affordable cost. The infrastructure to provide this service provides good wage jobs for Americans in a time when jobs are scarce. We hope you will take this time to invest in protecting an open Internet, but also supporting job creation during a recession when every job is precious. Thank you for listening to the voice of a working union member.
