The Infrastructure Coalition discussed possible interim Antenna Study Registration ("ASR") processing procedures relating to migratory bird issues. The Infrastructure Coalition expressed an openness to including height, lighting, and antenna structure (i.e., guy wires) as criteria, but expressed some concerns regarding including location as an interim criteria given the potential difficulty of defining clearly the specifics of such a criterion. The Coalition also discussed three potential categories of ASRs for such interim procedures – those that would be categorically excluded and not require the filing of an Environmental Assessment ("EA") and would not be placed on public notice, those that would require the filing of an EA and would be placed on public notice, and those that would be placed on public notice and for which an EA could be required by the Commission after review of any comments filed in response to the public notice. Representatives from the Infrastructure Coalition, Defenders of Wildlife and the American Bird Conservancy agreed to meet to discuss specifics regarding potential
