

Just a few months ago, the FCC ruled to open up a new swath of the Public Airwaves for use by Community Wireless Networks, neighborhood organizations, independent ISPs, schools, churches, and anyone else who wanted to create wireless broadband systems. But now, a coalition of major corporations is fighting to keep this spectrum for themselves -- they want to reopen the 3650-3700MHz proceedings and get the FCC to overturn its