

Net neutrality is absolutely indispensable for protecting our freedom of speech and democracy. The mainstream media are owned by a handful of huge multinational companies which means that our news and information is dominated by their financial interests, which usually lie far afield from full and balanced disclosure on many if not most key issues affecting the general public interest. A neutral internet open to all at no cost is our last and best protection against the corporate takeover of information.