

The open internet is a tremendous asset not only for the US, but also for the global community of which we are all inextricably connected to. It is a means of communication, education, enlightenment, personal and entrepreneurial advancement, advertising and marketing, competition of ideas and skills, discourse, recreation, and connecting with and being aware of other peoples regardless of distance. It is a great equalizer, and ideally should never be relegated to the hands of a few gatekeeping giants concerned only with profit, whether by censorship and throttling or not.

Do not allow Net Neutrality to be consumed or eradicated by the special interest groups of the few.