

Anything less than a neutral network is no longer free speech. An internet provider's only job should be to connect people equally. Net Neutrality is the reason the Internet has driven economic innovation, democratic participation and free speech online. It protects an individual's right to use any equipment, content or service without interference from the network provider.