

FCC,

While I appreciate any surveillance you might use to keep the Internet a legitimate, worry-free worldwide tool, I believe interference and limitations by governments, interest groups, communications companies, etc. should be PROHIBITED.

Such interference would devastate the wonderful and democratic medium that brings so much to this planet's population. It now allows everyone the ability to see what's going in their back yard, within and among nations. It also affords one the opportunity to evaluate and learn about ecology, poverty, history, ideology, sociology, science, technology and much more.

Let's not in America or elsewhere in the world put into practice what China has done to access to the Internet or allow private interests to control what people can access.

Gerald A. Pearson