

I want to see the control of the Internet remain in the hands of users and innovators and not by a handful of telephone and cable companies who will determine which Web sites we see and which we don't