

Large companies attempting to restrict internet access is another attempt by Corporate America to trample on the rights of Americans in the name of profit. Such restrictions of the internet are perversions of the intended goal of the internet; which, needless to say, was developed as a way to bring people together to facilitate the free, and unrestricted exchange of ideas. Any restrictions imposed on the internet would undoubtedly result in stifling scientific, economic and social progress in America as well as abroad. I implore you to let the internet remain the way it is, an unblemished bastion of free thought and idea exchange in an otherwise heavily censored world. Thank You
