

The Internet was not built by Comcast and AT&T -- in fact, they were late and poor adopters. They have always worked to make the maximum profit. Giving them pseudo-monopolistic control, allowing them to favor their clients at the expense of others, would be disastrous. It is the free and unfettered access to the Internet that has made it the success it is and fostered the development of the online age. Please support net neutrality. To let the large providers have their way would choke it off. We need the internet now more than ever as we struggle out of this recession caused by letting other big companies operate as they wished. Please don't make the same mistake with the internet, no matter how tempting the money is.
