

The impetus behind the development of the internet was to open up a new medium of public communication to the advantage of every element in our political and interpolitical cosmos. That means everybody; the idea was to develop an engine for the common good. In that respect, it was based on the ideals of our Constitution and Declaration of Independence, as well as the United Nations Declaration of Universal Rights. We cannot allow it to be hijacked and commandeered by special interest groups for their private advantage, to the exclusion of every person. Our political goal is supposed to be the Land of the Free, not the Bastion of Privilege.
