

The super rich and powerful are far too rich and powerful. They seem bent on turning the rest of us into serfs and slaves. They brainwash, lie, and obfuscate through the mainstream media so that the common person doesn't know that the very people he or she is listening to are actually causing (or facilitating the causing) of most of the problems in the world. The internet is about democracy and freedom, two things the planet has much less of these days. Years ago when the television news ceased to actually tell the news, I abandoned it. I rely on the internet almost exclusively to learn about what's really going on. I hope that progressive truth tellers, and seekers of justice will be able to continue to share their findings on the internet, and that these findings will be accessible to all. Further, I hope that the internet will enable a tipping point, where enough people will understand that only those with money actually have any freedom, and that the majority of those with the largest amounts of money are nothing but self-centered predators. I dream of the day when people will join together, to not only ensure democracy and freedom for all peoples of the world, but work to punish those corporations, politicians, lobbyists, and the war machine that are responsible for their suffering and misery. Additionally, a free and democratic internet would ensure that governments and corporations would not be allowed to gather large amounts of information, nor spy without just cause, on internet users. These two activities further subjugate an already weak and abused humankind. It does not matter if your government calls itself a democracy. If your politicians do not act in the interests of the majority of the people, it is a democracy in name only. Only politicians who act in the interest of the rich and powerful would vote against Net Neutrality.