

The internet is the last place an individual can communicate without corporate, or governmental, interference. The final frontier of freedom of speech is at stake. At least leave the internet open to everyone. Not everyone can afford the proposed charges. Since when does freedom of speech have a price. With the billions of dollars cable companies and telecommunication companies make on phone and television licensing fees, commercial fees, and consumer fees...THERE IS NO WAY THEY NEED THE MONEY. Consumers are all ready charged for internet access; any other fees would be simply greed.