

Internet affords freedom of expression, writing and sharing information, and finding alternative views; the discovery process available means people can invent, discover, encourage new approaches; being curious means I can read about people and cultures different from mine; The media such as television and newspapers is sick beyond repair, controlled beyond belief, and a waste of time; the Internet enables me opportunity to find alternative sources of news and information; Net Neutrality means I can create videos, blogs, information sources and financially controlled and controlling mainstream media are not determining what's funny or useful or valuable, instead we the people are much freer to do our thing; Internet enables me to engage with my community and organize for social change online; and, most of all, I don't want to be censored.