

An open internet builds and nurtures open minds. A closed internet would build and nurture closed minds. The internet is the last fair communication tool available to anyone with a computer, a cellphone, or just a ride to the library. We are not a free people without the internet in its current form. The American government has failed us in fresh, new ways over the past ten or so years, but this - the internet - is your chance to satisfy your populus without doing anything at all. Simply, let it exist as it currently exists. Let us have our freedom.
