

Dear People: There is no stronger underpinning for democracy than open communication. None. Putting the Internet into the hands of profit-making entities is simply a very bad idea, threatening that underpinning. Keep the Internet as it is, free and free-wheeling. It hasn't grown into its important status in our culture because somebody made a lot of money running it. In that respect, it's unlike any other communication medium with the possible exception of public broadcasting. Listen to the people. Please listen to the people. Thank you for being on the side of the people. More than 1.7 million Americans have already called on Washington to protect Net Neutrality — the rule that keeps control over the Internet in the hands of the people who use it.

The FCC must now act decisively in the public interest by enacting strong rules that keep the Internet free from blocking, censorship and discrimination.

Tell the FCC: Don't give in to pressure from AT&T, Comcast, Verizon and their lobbyists. Stand with us in support of a strong Net Neutrality rule.
