

The media and information corporations should be allowing local communities to allowing both republican and democratic parties to voice their platforms and ideas to the people who will be voting for them. If a community is responsible for electing their officials, then they should be given the opportunity to be fully educated in what their politicians are offering. The only way an area can make an informed decision on who they want in office is if they have been given the materials to understand what policies will make their community better.