

Unfortunately, in this Digital Age of Media, it is getting harder and harder to expect newspapers to still exist in 30 years. The new generation uses the internet as a source for everything because it is quick and reliable in most cases. Communities, and the older generation will suffer from this the most because they are used to receiving actual papers to tell them about events and daily happening. But I think that they will be fine without newspapers because there is still television news that presents them with local news and information around and outside of their communities.
