

I'm commenting about the availability to communities of local news and information. In a digital age, it seems like local news has been crippled by the vast amounts of other information constantly pouring in by digital means.