

David Sutphen, co-chair of the AT&T-funded Internet Innovation Alliance, says that Net Neutrality is a "distraction" that "only concerns those already online." Sutphen calls Net Neutrality rules "divisive new regulations," which could have "unintended consequences" for those seeking to bridge the digital divide.

Giant MSM outlets and their cousins the giant communications greedsters want control of the now free and open Internet. Their brainwashed minds can only think in terms of "growth" and "profits". They're not concerned about openness or democracy or fairness or anything except control of markets and profits.

There is nothing wrong with the way we now use the Internet. It's not broke. So, don't let the greedsters "fix" it. Keep it open and free, not closed and made into a "privilege".
